When is the best time To sell property?

There are a few factors that play a part when it comes to listing your property that won't have much to do with the time of the year. Things like personal circumstances and market conditions are going to play the biggest role in choosing when to market your property. However, if the market is right and it is time for you to sell, then it makes sense to opt for the time of year best suited to attracting buyers. Here, we take a look at the benefits of listing your property at different times of the year.

Selling in warmer months

Traditionally, spring has long been considered the best time of year to sell a property. Your garden and outdoor area will probably look their best in spring, and temperatures mean more people will be out and about and likely to look into an open home. This being said, in Australasia, we see a lot of properties enter the market heading into autumn, with March, April and May usually attracting a large number of new listings and auctions. Whilst this means there's also a lot of buyer activity, if you're wanting to set your property apart from the crowd you might consider listing your property earlier in the year.

Listing a property around February means you'll get the jump on listings that tend to come onto the market from March onwards, and it also means you'll start to attract buyers after a long holiday period. This may target buyers who have had time off over the Christmas and New Year period and have had time to reflect on their next big move for the coming year, including buying a new property.

Selling in cooler months

Whilst not the traditional time of year most agents will tell you to list your property, winter could still be the right time of year to list your home for sale. One advantage to listing your home during the cooler months is the relative lack of competition, with other sellers holding off until the spring period. With fewer homes on the market, your property has a much better chance of standing out.

The location of your home may also play a part. If your property is within an area which snows, or is nestled at the foot of a mountain range that looks particularly beautiful in winter, you can use the season to capitalise on views and winter activities. It's also an opportunity to show how warm, comfortable and inviting your home can be in winter. Make the most of features like fire places and wood stoves, light candles, and use plush cushions and warm throws throughout living areas.

Selling over the school holidays

There's lots of commentary on whether or not listing your property for sale during a school holiday period is a good idea. One school of thought is that this is a great time of year, with people able to view open homes and even attend auctions held mid-week. Another suggests this isn't the best time of year, with people often travelling away from home, or switching off during their downtime.

According to the end of year auction data from realestate.com.au, looking at the percentage of clearance rates, December actually achieved more sales through auction than October and only slightly less than November, with 55.89% of properties selling before or at auction in December 2014, compared with 53.41% and 56.35% respectively. These figures would suggest that buyers are no less active, at least at auctions, during school holidays.

There are merits to listing your home at several different times of the year, so ask your ROSS REALTY sales consultant which time of year they would recommend for your home and location, as they'll be able to draw on their market insights and knowledge and make an informed suggestion for your situation.

How to choose a sales consultant

When it comes to selling one of your most valuable assets, your home, it makes sense to take the time to choose a qualified and knowledgeable sales consultant who has the right tools and strategies at their disposal.

When speaking with sales consultants, don't be afraid to ask the right questions to make sure you trust your consultant and to make sure you're confident they have the experience to sell your home quickly and for the best price.

The following are a few things to consider

Is your salesperson qualified?

To sell real estate in Australia or New Zealand, you need to be a qualified sales consultant, and that means you need to hold the proper valid licence.

In New Zealand, the Real Estate Agents Authority issues real estate licences to sales consultants and ensures they undergo continuous professional development as well as monitoring registered agents to maintain a high standard of professionalism.

In Australia, sales consultants in each state must register as a real estate salesperson after the successful completion of a Certificate of Registration Program.

It is a valid question to ask your sales consultant if they hold the proper licence.

Is your salesperson experienced?

Experienced sales consultants don't just know all there is to know about selling real estate, they also know about your local market, average house and unit prices, what kinds of homes and even features are popular with buyers, important negotiation strategies, and how to effectively market your home.

That's why it's vital to sit down with a prospective sales person and ask detailed questions about your market, how much homes have sold for in the area, and what they'll be doing to market your property.

An experienced sales consultant should be able to take you through all of this in great detail and answer any questions you might have.

Is your salesperson focused on you?

It's about people. Successfully buying and selling real estate is so often about understanding human needs and aspirations. That's why ROSS REALTY sales representatives are committed to creating meaningful and genuine personal relationships.

The huge volume of referrals and repeat business generated is proof this method works. A complete consultative approach is what makes the ROSS REALTY way of doing things so seamless.

Combined with a solid work ethic and well-developed negotiation skills these qualities ensure that the ROSS REALTY consultants lead the field.

Is your salesperson able to achieve the right result?

Achieving the quick sale of your property for the right price can depend on more than your sales consultant alone. A consultant needs the right tools at their disposal and the support to use them effectively.

At ROSS REALTY our sales consultants have a full range of marketing, research and technological tools available to them at all times. Working within a highly motivated team environment, the business, customer support and online services that they can draw upon are truly impressive.

Here's how we make that happen:

- Regular written marketing report
- Marketing review meetings
- All offers presented in writing

Marketing your property.

Written marketing plan

Following initial consultation and property inspection, we will present a comprehensive marketing strategy specifically tailored for you, your property and the current market conditions. A fully-detailed marketing action plan calendar will be prepared which clearly identifies where and when all scheduled promotional activities and regular client contact will take place. Because we believe that our relationship is a partnership, your input is invaluable at this key stage.

Post-inspection feedback

Following each visit by an individual potential buyer and, of course, immediately after all inspections, we will keep you completely up-to-date on how your property was perceived, pertinent comments, price-relevant issues and prospective 'hot prospects'. Just like us, you need to know exactly what's going on at all times.

Weekly written marketing report

This is an important tool for assessing market reaction to your property and also to identify those prospective buyers who are showing the most interest. Based on this regular information, we will make on-going recommendations which will maximise the effectiveness of our targeted marketing efforts.

marketing review meeting

It is during the initial few weeks after your property is first introduced to the market and has gained a high profile and maximum level of interest that it is most valuable to review the marketing progress to date. A frank and open discussion between client and consultant can often identify new opportunities and strategies which can build upon the original marketing plan.

All offers presented in writing

Because it is your property, it is solely your decision whether to accept or decline a specific offer. For your consideration we will formally present every offer received in writing so that you are better able to make an informed judgement. Obviously we are only too happy to offer advice, but we will always leave the final choice up to you without exerting any undue influence whatsoever.

Preparing your home for sale

Why choose to hold open homes when selling?

Open homes are one of the most effective ways of marketing a property and attracting interest from a wide variety of buyers. Some of the advantages are:

- You have plenty of time to ensure your property is tidy and ready for inspections
- You can control the viewing times
- Open homes can create plenty of activity, even in a slow market
- Interest and activity can trigger urgency with buyers
- The sales consultant's time is put to best and most effective use. They will have the opportunity to talk to numerous people about your property
- Comments from open home visitors can provide feedback on price, presentation, sales appeal, etc.

“Look at your home from a potential buyer's perspective.”

Top tips for attracting potential buyers and higher offers

De-clutter

The first tip is the simplest. It's obviously a must to clean and tidy your home before an inspection, but it's crucial to also get rid of clutter that could stand in the way of a potential buyer picturing themselves within the home. That means getting rid of personal nick knacks and photographs, unnecessary furniture or furniture within a room not designed for that purpose, for example a bed within a space traditionally used as a living area. Even if it means putting belongings and furniture into storage until the property sells, the investment will be worth it.

Repair

Make any aesthetic repairs well before inspection. Things as small as a chip in paint in an interior wall could detract from the overall feel for the home, so get these things up-to-date before your open home. You could also invest in updating features like tired curtains, older fixtures and fittings, or laying new turf if you have a patchy lawn.

Style

Once clutter free, consider using a home stylist or home staging service. The results can be dramatic. Home stylists will take a look at your space, and then loan you the furniture which is the size and style best suited for your home, which will make a space look bigger, comfortable and liveable. Again, this will help potential buyers to see themselves living in the space.

Photograph

Before even getting to your first home inspection, consider using a professional photographer to take quality, well-lit pictures of your home. After going to the trouble of updating, de-cluttering and staging your property, the last thing you want to do is turn people away before they've even inspected your home. Professional photos are taken with professional equipment, they can make spaces look bigger, well-lit and showcase them in the best possible way. Plus you benefit from the experience of someone who knows exactly how to take a photo that appeals. This way, you attract buyers looking online, scanning through ads, and looking through the paper. It's about piquing interest to attract buyers to inspect in the first place.

Your property may not need all of the above, so it's really about taking a look at your home objectively from a potential buyer's perspective and assessing what needs to be done. What would distract you if you were inspecting the property? What would you want to replace or update if you were thinking of making an offer? If you were to say to yourself "this place is great, but...", how would you finish that sentence?

Once you've made a list of the possible things your property needs, you can employ the top four tips above to make your home a stand-out to the sea of potential buyers out there.

Pricing your home for sale

The price of your home must be right. Too low and you lose money. Too high and you lose buyers. That's where the intimate local market knowledge and expertise from your ROSS REALTY marketing consultant comes in.

The price of success

The most difficult task for most sellers is determining the value of their home. Many different elements can combine to create unrealistic expectations - be it uninformed and optimistic opinion, the cost of improvements a seller hopes to recover, or the final amount needed to realise future plans. The best method is to study the current real estate market facts and figures. Your ROSS REALTY sales consultant will show you comparisons of other similar homes in your area - those which have sold, those which have yet to sell and those which will represent your competition. Quite simply, the current property market determines the value of your home.

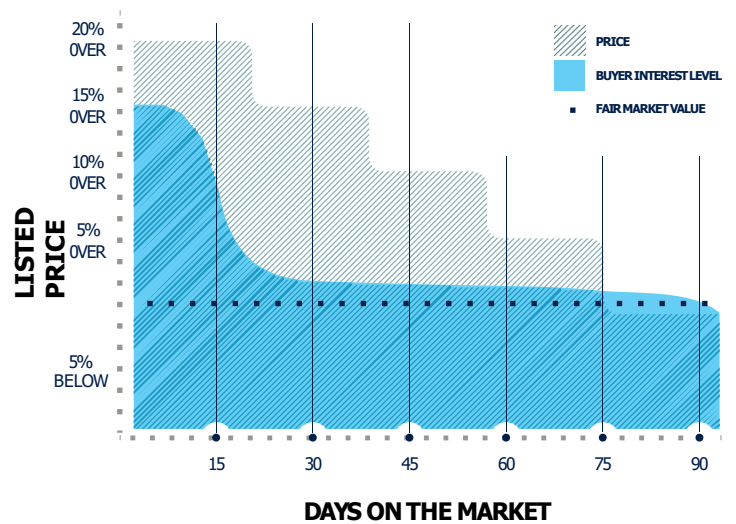

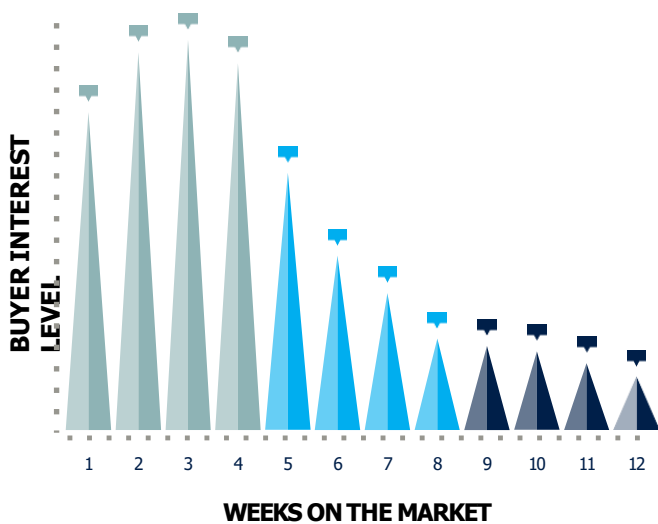

Buyers will see your home for what it is and, while they may still look, if the price is too high, they'll pass on your property for one elsewhere. This is backed by research clearly showing that properties that sell quickest also sell closest to their initial asking price.

Time limits

Buyer interest is greatest for your property within the second and third week of its entrance into the market. After this, interest falls away quite dramatically. To maximise this window of opportunity your ROSS REALTY sales consultant will design a marketing programme that peaks during this prime period. Your property will have the highest profile for this vital time. If you have decided to market your property with a price, remember that it must be valued correctly right from the outset to benefit from this initial surge of interest.

A realistic return

It's a fact that over-priced properties take longer to sell and do not attract the optimum number of potential buyers, particularly during the prime selling period. The longer properties sit on the market the lower price they achieve. After three or more months this can often be 20% to 25% less. To ensure this doesn't happen, your ROSS REALTY sales consultant has all the relevant information necessary to help you price your property correctly for the best return.

The best way to Sell your home

With market conditions constantly changing and no two properties ever the same there's never one 'tried and true' method of selling. The type of property you wish to sell and the timeframe in which you want to do it ultimately determine the most appropriate and effective marketing strategy.

ROSS REALTY people are top achievers, no matter what it takes. And, while the result should always be what's best for you, that outcome can be achieved in a number of different ways.

“The best option is listing exclusively with one company.”

Exclusive listing

By exclusively signing with ROSS REALTY your home is immediately entered into our extensive international database, gaining exposure to over 5,200 sales consultants in over 790 offices internationally.

It is also featured on our website. Exclusive listing avoids the frustrations and lack of action so often experienced when dealing with a number of different real estate companies. It sidesteps the conflicting agendas and different procedures and maintains a strong brand grounding for your property. Most importantly, listing your home with ROSS REALTY ensures your home is backed with the best possible resources come sale time.

Auction

The advantages of the auction are numerous. You set the terms, conditions and deadline. You agree on an undisclosed minimum reserve price, with no pressure to sell if the property fetches a lower than expected bid. There's also the very real possibility of acquiring a higher price – especially if keen buyer interest promotes competition. You'll also attract only genuinely interested, cash-in-hand buyers with no subject-to-sale or subject-to-finance uncertainty.

There is even the opportunity to accept offers prior to auction day. A positive statistical sales rate together with property being on the market for such a short time have many regarding auctions as the most successful 'non-price' method of selling. Auction marketing motivates genuine buyers to act. It's also the least disruptive and intrusive method because you only need open your home at times which suit you best.

Tender

This method of marketing creates a high profile for your property and establishes a competitive environment without having to list a price. You also set the terms, conditions and deadline. Prospective buyers become emotionally involved before they consider price and have only one opportunity to put forward their most competitive bid. You have the opportunity to accept, decline or continue negotiations with any interested party. It's your choice. You're in control. Increased enquiries and inspections are often generated by this sales strategy. All tender details remain undisclosed and absolutely confidential.

General or open listing

Getting many people from different real estate companies working for you may sound great but in reality it can be confusing and frustrating. The lack of co-ordination, cohesion and focus is often more disruptive than advantageous as personality and ego conflicts can add to the stress and sense of dislocation sellers sometimes experience.

For the maximum amount of time, effort and resources spent on your property the best option is listing exclusively with one company. You'll then have your appointed marketing consultant assume total responsibility for the successful sale of your home.

Private Treaty

Private Treaty is where your home is advertised for sale with an asking price. Your agent will then negotiate with prospective buyers on your behalf and present all offers to you. Private Treaty allows for greater flexibility for both you and the buyer as certain conditions can be negotiated into the contract at your request or the request of the potential buyer, such as subject to building and pest inspections, or subject to finance.

Technology.

With successful real estate business based around establishing excellent personal and professional relationships, strong paths of communication are a necessity. Due to the highest level of technological support, we have the ability to access vital information and communicate this to potential purchasers. It's this capability that keeps ROSS REALTY on the cutting edge of technology-based support.

Information at your fingertips

The ROSS REALTY website receives hundreds of unique visitors every month. These aren't just domestic enquiries – there are also a large number of international hits.

The number of people who log on in search of property is only getting larger. The majority of these prospective buyers shop at their leisure and have definite ideas about exactly where they want to live, what kind of home they want and what they can afford to buy.

The information provided on the ROSS REALTY website is comprehensive, to say the least. It offers a detailed property search with virtual and video property tours. And that's just the start.

The highest visibility – from the moment you list

Of course your home will also be automatically listed on our website. The comprehensive detail of each listing enables potential national and international buyers an ease of access that's unparalleled.

With just a few clicks of the mouse a virtual tour of your property affords these buyers the opportunity to visit without ever leaving their computer.

A buyer-seller matching system that can't be beaten

ROSS REALTY also offers the services of your own personal account online. This is an intelligent, reliable system that automates the process of matching buyers with properties that meet their criteria. And it's all done fast, automatically and confidentially online.

Accepting an offer.

At ROSS REALTY, our commitment to you is to bring you each offer formally in writing. We will do this by providing interested buyers with a contract, and will give both you and the potential buyer the opportunity to add conditions when negotiating the sale of your property.

Common conditions of sale are subject to:

- Finance
- A builder's report
- Sale of another property
- Solicitor's approval of the contract
- Specialist inspection or approval

Your sales consultant will have the purchaser sign a standard approved contract with their offer and any conditions of sale either you or the purchaser has requested. Once this process has been completed your sales consultant will check whether any other interested parties are putting in an offer. This system ensures it remains fair to all parties in a multiple offer situation.

As the vendor, you can then accept the offer, reject it or counter sign it. Counter signing usually occurs when you are not satisfied with the price offered and/or conditions included and wish to subsequently alter them. The contract will then be brought back to the purchaser for their consideration.

If accepted, the purchaser will initial your alteration and the property is under offer subject to any conditions that the contract may contain. Alternatively the purchaser also has the right to counter sign. Your sales consultant will continue negotiations between you and the purchaser until you are both in agreement.

After an offer is accepted

Once an offer has been accepted and all parties have signed the contract, the purchaser will be asked to pay a deposit. This usually equates to 10% of the purchase price.

Once paid, this deposit is held in a trust account until the contract is confirmed, i.e. becomes unconditional in all respects. It is then paid to you. If the contract does not become unconditional the deposit will be repaid to the purchaser.

Completing the sale

Settlement generally takes place between you and the purchaser and your legal/financial representatives. Officially, it's where ownership passes from you to the purchaser, and the balance of the sale price is paid to you or your financial institution.

As the seller, you would have set the settlement date within the contract of sale. Settlement usually occurs 30-90 days after the contract has been signed, depending on what has been agreed upon.

The purchaser is entitled to inspect the property at a reasonable time the week prior to settlement, and as the seller, you must hand the property over in the condition in which it was sold.

On settlement the purchaser's solicitor will exchange the following with your solicitor:

- Monies
- Transfer documentation
- Keys to the property

Within a few days of settlement the purchaser's solicitor or financier will register the necessary documentation and mortgage transfer with the Land Titles Registry.

Possession of the property usually takes place on the settlement day although you and the buyer can agree for these dates to be different.

The next steps are to ensure you're well prepared for the move to your new home.
